FUND COMMENTARY

The S&P Europe 350 Shariah index posted a modest gain of 0.7% in EUR terms in November, but declined by 2.0% in USD and 0.9% in GBP. The Republican's decisive victory in the US elections added to volatility as investors assessed potential consequences. Export-driven European industries, such as automotive and chemicals, faced setbacks amid threats from the incoming US administration to raise import duties. The US dollar appreciated, potentially benefitting portfolio companies with significant US end-market exposure.

ASML contributed positively to portfolio performance in November, with the technology company reaffirming its 2030 ambitions during its Capital Markets Day. At the mid-range of its guidance, we estimate this translates to mid-teens earnings growth by the end of the decade, driven by ongoing demand for semiconductors, particularly within AI. EssilorLuxottica performed well, continuing its upward trend seen throughout the year. Innovations like the Stelless myopia control lens contributed to Q3 revenue growth, as reported in October. The company's partnership with Meta in smart glasses has further helped sentiment. Halma saw its shares rise following the release of its half year results which showed 11.5% organic revenue and 17% EBIT growth. The group's photonics business continues to benefit from the rollout of datacentre infrastructure in the US.

Nestlé declined following a soft Q3 sales report in October. The company's Capital Markets Day, held in November, failed to generate enthusiasm, as expectations for short-term growth acceleration under the new CEO remain unfulfilled. The price-to-earnings (PE) ratio dropped to a decade low, falling below 17x. Ferrari's shares suffered from profit taking following a strong year-to-date performance. The company delivered in-line Q3 results with 7% organic revenue growth, 14% EPS growth and confirmed its full-year objectives. Kingspan detracted from performance as the construction leader in panels and insulation reported Q3 results showing flat year-on-year trading profit, leading to slight consensus downgrades. While demand for panels has improved slightly, overall visibility remains relatively limited. However, the order backlog is growing, suggesting a promising start for 2025.
