KEY RISKS

Credit Risk: Risks associated with issuers of debt securities, even those with a very high rating, may not be able to make payments to investors, or the fear associated with this risk may result in a decrease in the value of their debt securities.

Emerging Market Risk: Risks associated with investing in emerging markets. Due to their political instability, the volatility of the exchange rate of their currencies, and the limited number of investment opportunities, the risk of these markets is greater than in countries considered as developed.

Interest Rate Risk: Risks that the value of fixed-income securities will vary inversely to interest rate fluctuations.

For full disclosures on all key risks, please refer to the Key Investor Information Document (KID).

Monthly Commentary

April proved to be a highly volatile month for financial markets. The announcement of a surprise increase in U.S. reciprocal tariffs—especially on Chinese imports—triggered a broad-based market selloff. Even U.S. treasuries, typically considered safe-haven assets, were not immune to the negative fallout from the tariff announcement. Investor sentiment improved after President Trump announced a 90-day extension of the reciprocal tariffs. Markets stabilized further as U.S. government officials made comments that helped ease investor concerns. Both equity and bond markets rallied toward the end of the month. After a significant decline in the early part of April, high-yield bonds recovered to end the month flat, while investment-grade bonds posted positive returns, supported by lower U.S. government bond yields. In contrast to the improved sentiment in other markets during the latter half of the month, oil prices failed to rebound from their monthly lows as the OPEC+ alliance decided to increase production amid slowing global growth. Despite the sharp correction in oil prices, Middle East (ME) credit—both sukuk and conventional-performed in line with global credit benchmarks, with the ME investment-grade segment outperforming broader emerging market investment-grade indices.
